The power control mechanism consists of a governor and electric motor, which are directly connected to the diesel engine, and is designed to control the amount of fuel that is supplied to the diesel engine and to adjust rotational speed and output.