

General location and artist's impression of the power station

Power station overview

- Water discharged for flow regulation is redirected from the existing maintenance discharge canal to a penstock to be newly constructed for generating power at a new water turbine generator. Water is then redirected back to the existing flushing canal.